THE ABUNDANCE CODE

DISCOVER THE SECRETS TO LIVING ABUNDANTLY AND PURPOSEFULLY

JEFF SIMONS
DISCLAIMER AND TERMS OF USE AGREEMENT

The author and publisher have used their best efforts in preparing this report. The author and publisher make no representation or warranties with respect to the accuracy, applicability, fitness, or completeness of the contents of this report. The information contained in this report is strictly for educational purposes. Therefore, if you wish to apply ideas contained in this report, you are taking full responsibility for your actions.

EVERY EFFORT HAS BEEN MADE TO ACCURATELY REPRESENT THIS PRODUCT AND ITS POTENTIAL. HOWEVER, THERE IS NO GUARANTEE THAT YOU WILL IMPROVE IN ANY WAY USING THE TECHNIQUES AND IDEAS IN THESE MATERIALS. EXAMPLES IN THESE MATERIALS ARE NOT TO BE INTERPRETED AS A PROMISE OR GUARANTEE OF ANYTHING. SELF-HELP AND IMPROVEMENT POTENTIAL IS ENTIRELY DEPENDENT ON THE PERSON USING OUR PRODUCT, IDEAS AND TECHNIQUES. YOUR LEVEL OF IMPROVEMENT IN ATTAINING THE RESULTS CLAIMED IN OUR MATERIALS DEPENDS ON THE TIME YOU DEVOTE TO THE PROGRAM, IDEAS AND TECHNIQUES MENTIONED, KNOWLEDGE AND VARIOUS SKILLS. SINCE THESE FACTORS DIFFER ACCORDING TO INDIVIDUALS, WE CANNOT GUARANTEE YOUR SUCCESS OR IMPROVEMENT LEVEL. NOR ARE WE RESPONSIBLE FOR ANY OF YOUR ACTIONS. MANY FACTORS WILL BE IMPORTANT IN DETERMINING YOUR ACTUAL RESULTS AND NO GUARANTEES ARE MADE THAT YOU WILL ACHIEVE RESULTS SIMILAR TO OURS OR ANYBODY ELSE'S, IN FACT NO GUARANTEES ARE MADE THAT YOU WILL ACHIEVE ANY RESULTS FROM OUR IDEAS AND TECHNIQUES IN OUR MATERIAL.

The author and publisher disclaim any warranties (express or implied), merchantability, or fitness for any particular purpose. The author and publisher shall in no event be held liable to any party for any direct, indirect, punitive, special, incidental or other consequential damages arising directly or indirectly from any use of this material, which is provided “as is”, and without warranties. As always, the advice of a competent professional should be sought. The author and publisher do not warrant the performance, effectiveness or applicability of any sites listed or linked to in this report. All links are for information purposes only and are not warranted for content, accuracy or any other implied or explicit purpose.
Introduction

Step One: Cultivating Abundance

Step Two: Developing Abundance

Step Three: Keeping Abundance

Conclusion
In today’s society, success is often measured by a person’s wealth and the type of luxury one can afford reflects his or her social status. Possessing a branded good, a supercar or a big house are requirements an individual should have for him or her to be placed on the pedestal of success. Because of that, happiness is always mistakenly equated with being rich.

In this eBook however, you will learn that the key to true success is abundance. Abundance is a state of contentment. It is only in this state will you be able to open yourself up to the blessings of the world and in turn, achieve your goals and aspirations. On the other hand, the outcome you desire after reading this guide may be different as you gain more perspectives towards abundance and be exposed to the dynamics behind it.

This step-by-step guide will aid you to identify what abundance means to you personally and lead you to achieving it for a more fulfilled life. Many have tried and succeeded and it is only a matter of time before you do, provided you adhere to the steps closely. The journey to abundance is through habits and simplicities so read with an open mind and let us get started.
STEP ONE: CULTIVATING ABUNDANCE

“Abundance is not something we acquire, it is something we tune in to.”

Wayne Dyre

To be abundant is to be content — in spirit, mind and body. It is to be aware that we have plentiful beyond what our mere eyes can see. Before we being though, let us first understand the essentials of thriving.

Maslow’s Eight Basic Needs

Each and every one of us is motivated by a standard set of needs which if is in lack, will cause us to feel empty or stunted in life. Everything, from the way we behave to the reason we love, is due to these needs.

Deficit Needs

1. Physiological needs: The base motivation of every living thing such as food, warmth, shelter, sex, water and air. The key ingredients that we need to survive at the most basic level. Without these, we cannot focus on anything else. Our bodies shut down and our mind is only focused towards remedying these deficiencies. Fulfilling biological needs first is the only way we can be comfortable and thrive in our environment.

2. Safety needs: Once our physical needs are satisfied, it is our primal instinct to seek safety. We need to be somewhere away from imminent danger, a comfortable environment where there is at least a certain sense of order and familiarity. Without these, we will constantly be paranoid and anxious.

3. Belonging needs: Human beings are social creatures. Put anyone alone on a deserted island, and within days or even hours, the restlessness will start kicking in. We were created to seek emotion–based relationships, such as friendship, sexual intimacy and familial bonds. From educational institutions, to businesses, to our very neighborhoods, being social is the foundation of the very world we live in. A lack of this need may cause negative social emotions and low extraversion values.

4. Self-esteem needs: Respect is valued by all. To give respect, to everyone (including ourselves), and to receive it, is the fourth basic need. As we have made social interactions and relationships, we now constantly seek alignment with the world around us. As we affirm our behaviour, the more we accept it ourselves. This allows us to feel righteous and a sense of contribution in our actions.

Growth Needs

When the basic needs are fulfilled, we can start to focus on the following four needs: cognitive, aesthetic, self-actualisation, and self-transcendence. These factors are what we constantly build upon over time. The more they are fulfilled, the more complete we become.

5. Cognitive need: Since young, we have a desire for stimulation. We want to explore, to learn, and understand the world around us. This is how we grow intellectually, and make sense of our natural surroundings. If not, we will be lost and confused. This will also hinder the self-actualization process later on, possibly leading to an identity crisis.

6. Aesthetic need: Maslow believed that humans needed to see beauty and experience aesthetically pleasing environments to refresh themselves. This allows us to have a feeling of intimacy with nature, and everything that surrounds us.

7. Self-Actualization: This derives from our need to be the best versions of ourselves. It motivates us to strive for our passions. As we improve ourselves, we see more positivity in the future, and feel better in being able to guide the generations to come.
8. Self–Transcendence: Also known as the spiritual need, this motivation is slightly different from the others. Self–transcendence is actually accessible from many levels. Upon fulfillment, we will develop feelings of integrity and better realization of ourselves. It is taking comfort in knowing that there are some things that we will never understand, and accepting the world for what it is.

Developing Abundance through Maslow's Needs

With Abraham Maslow's eight basic needs in mind, we can look within ourselves to see which aspects we can work on. Remember, to be abundant is to be able to fulfill the final need of self–transcendence.

Ask yourself:

- Do I have food, water and air? (Physiological need)

  If yes, then you are physiologically abundant.

- Will I have a roof over my head tonight? (Safety need)

  If yes, then you are abundant in safety.

- Do I have loved ones who cherish me? (Belonging need)

  If yes, you are socially abundant.

- Do I live in a place with human rights? (Self–esteem need)

  If yes, you are abundant in self–esteem.

If you answered yes to all of the above, then you are already abundant enough. You have everything you need to survive on the most basic level. With these preliminary needs fulfilled, the remaining four are simple in the mind. As you observe at what you already have through gratitude, you allow yourself to shift your motivations in life towards your passions and self-improvement. This fulfills your cognitive and self-actualization needs.

Sounds confusing? Don't think of it as a checklist or pyramid. Instead look at it as a circle. With the basic needs fulfilled, you have all aspects to thrive. All you have to do is keep looking within yourself. Realize that all you need is already with you. You will achieve self-transcendence.

Maslow's Basic Needs in a Concentric Circle Chart

5-minute Exercise

1. Close your eyes.
2. Breathe in deeply, all the way into your stomach.
3. Think about how you are abundant in physiology, safety, socially, and self-esteem. How blessed you are to have food in the fridge, shelter above your head, air in your lungs and that you have the freedom and time to just reflect.

4. Let the feelings of gratitude fill you and breathe out.

5. Repeat nine times.

(If you catch yourself smiling even slightly, you are in good focus. Keep it up!)

Now, think about what you have achieved today that makes you feel content and note it down somewhere. It can be anything. Even if reading the first chapter of this book makes you content, note it down! If you do this more often, positivity will keep growing on to you. This is incredibly important as a first step. By gathering your positive thoughts and feelings, you are cultivating abundance into your life.
STEP TWO: DEVELOPING ABUNDANCE

Picture this.

A man named Ryan is lying on his bed. It's 3am. Ryan shuts his eyes close, hoping to get as much rest as he can. Work is at 8am the next day. His last thought for the night is that he is going to be late. His eyes open again and immediately glances at the clock. It’s 8.30 in the morning. 'I’m late. My day is ruined', he thought to himself. After turning his drawers upside down, he finally decides to leave in mismatched socks. Hastily, he tries to rush to work. It starts to rain heavily. All the traffic lights seem to turn red just as he gets near. Finally, he finds a parking spot. The boss is calling non-stop as he parks. Distracted and in a rush, he accidentally scratches his car on a nearby lamp post. Why are all these bad things happening to him?

Answer: His thoughts were negative the whole time.

Developing Abundance through Positivity

“The pleasantest things in the world are pleasant thoughts, and the great art of life is to have as many of them as possible.” – Michel De Montaigne

Everyone has been through a similar situation in their lives before. Things just do not go our way, at the worst of timings. It is however, highly probable that we are the ones that had set ourselves up in these series of unfortunate events.

Everything that happens to us, whether intended or not, occurs because of us and it is imperative that we stay positive no matter what circumstance we are in.

Negativity attracts unfortunate events, and positivity brings in opportunities. Referring to the story mentioned above, there were so many gloom-ridden thoughts and actions that led to the overall outcome. Instead of looking forward to the opportunities a new day would bring, Ryan subconsciously set himself up for misery. With the expectation of waking up tired, he unknowingly tries to compensate by oversleeping. He reacts to this with a foreboding thought that his day is ruined. As such, his perspective of everything changes. His mind becomes unfocused with the notion of unfortunate events, and simple tasks like looking for socks becomes difficult for him. He does not see that the roads are clearer because it is rather late and most of the morning commute has already arrived to work. The traffic lights are not against him, he is just speeding through, and each second having to stop, feels like minutes. In his uneasy state, a simple phone vibration distracts him from properly parking, even though he has been parking there for the past few years.

As put by organizational psychologists, Howard M. Weiss and Russell Cropanzano, “any outcome is a result of the mixture of the event itself, and our reaction towards it.” It also said that our reaction especially, contributes to the majority of the final outcome.

A lifestyle of positivity leads to more positive outcomes and vice versa. How we react to the events in our lives determine our final outcome which in turn lead to more events in relation to the outcome. It is a never-ending cycle.

The Event–Outcome Cycle
Now that you understand how the event–outcome cycle works, below are a few effective methods to enhance your positivity in life.

Plan Your Present Positively

In goal-setting, many of us usually look forward to our dream lives in the future. We plan what house we want to have in the next decade, the country to visit during the next summer vacation, retiring and how to spend our golden years etc. This is not wrong. However, as said in the previous chapter, to cultivate abundance is to seek what we already have. While it is definitely encouraged to plan for the future, the majority of our energy should be focused on the present, or as close to the present as possible, to live an abundant life. In short, be gracious of the best that has happened today, and be hopeful of the best that may happen tomorrow.

Positive Action

Through positive actions, we reaffirm our thoughts and allow ourselves to attract good things. Smile throughout the day. Do daily activities to the highest standard possible. If you are making yourself coffee, put effort in making it the best one in your life. Eventually, you will. And if it works for something as simple as coffee, it is amazing what can happen when you apply the same positive actions to bigger things.

React Positively

Sometimes, life puts us in difficult situations. People may try to be rude to us throughout the day. However, it is always important to have a clear mind. Fire does not fight fire, it builds unto it. When put in heated situations, always remain calm and cool. Remember, everyone has their own reasons for the way they behave and unfortunate events rarely happen on purpose. If we react graciously, it only reflects our character, and in time, others around us can only return the same attitude — that is graciously. This creates a positive environment around us and enables the cycle of positivity to continue flowing.

Positive Reflections

As the day comes to a close, we are back to the first step. We look back on everything good that has happened, and bask in the blessings of the present. We cultivate abundance once again and ready ourselves to develop it again the next day.

Your Exercise For The Week

Every single second is an opportunity to change your life, because in any moment you can change the way you feel. – Rhonda Byrne

Do this every day for one week my friend:

1. Think about all the elements in your current life that make you happy, and fill yourself positively.

2. Cultivate your abundance. (As mentioned in Step One)

3. If you can have the perfect day, how would it go about? Think about it and how it could possibly lead up to the desired outcome.

4. Take things as they are, and let the events around you slowly unfold.

5. Stay open-minded and opportunity will come your way. It may or may not be the opportunity you expected, but make the best of it and trust that blessing is on its way.

6. At the end of today, write down what you expected, and which parts of what truly happened was better.

7. Repeat for a week and be amazed at how much your life becomes!
Abundance is a funny thing. Naturally, everyone is blessed with abundance. Look at a toddlers and see how they are always so jovial, carefree and most of all, happy. But observe adults, and it seems that this childlike joy has faded through age. It is even said that children laugh more than 88 times a day, while adults about only 18 times. As time passes, we are more exposed to factors that limit our ability to attract abundance. Instead of following our natural calling, we are forced to follow orders from bosses and to adhere to society’s image and peer pressure.

Below is an interesting anecdote that has been told to many generations in the Brazilian culture.

The Tycoon and The Fisherman

There once was a wealthy business tycoon who was on a hiking trip through Brazil. His businesses were doing incredibly well. He had his collection of luxury cars, employees who would do anything to be recognised by him, and enough money to retire anytime he wants. Alas, even with all the riches, he felt a certain emptiness deep in his heart. He had spent his entire life working on his business empire, but still could not find happiness. It was then he decided to take a break from work and go on a journey of soul-searching through the unfamiliar lands of Brazil. He desperately wanted to learn how the villagers can be so happy even living in poverty.

After a few days of travel, he ended up in Icaraizinho, a tiny fishing village in North Brazil. He was observing a local fisherman rowing back to shore after catching a few large fish. The tycoon was impressed. Even then, his business–centric mind was crafting new ways to earn money.

_Tycoon:_ How long does it take you to catch so many fish?

_Fisherman:_ Oh, just a short while.
Tycoon: Then, why don't you stay longer at sea and catch even more?

Fisherman: This is enough to feed my whole family.

Tycoon: So, what do you do for the rest of the day?

Fisherman: Well, everyday, I wake up early in the morning, go out to sea and catch a few fish, then go back and play with my kids. In the afternoon, I take a nap with my wife, and when evening comes, I join my buddies in the village for a drink – we play guitar, sing and dance throughout the night.

The tycoon was astonished. The fisherman had so much opportunity to change his lifestyle and be rich like him. He felt that fate had brought him there and then, to achieve his calling, to help this fisherman achieve more. Perhaps, this was his way to happiness.

Tycoon: I have a PhD in business management. I could help you to become a more successful person. From now on, you should spend more time at sea and try to catch as many fish as possible. When you have saved enough money, you could buy a bigger boat and catch even more fish. Soon you will be able to afford to buy more boats, set up your own company, your own production plant for canned food and distribution network. By then, you will have moved out of this village and to Sao Paulo, where you can set up HQ to manage your other branches.

Fisherman: And after that?
The tycoon laughed heartily at the fisherman's naivety.

Tycoon: After that, you can live like a king in your own house, and when the time is right, you can go public and float your shares in the Stock Exchange, and you will be rich.

Fisherman: And after that?

Tycoon: After that, you can finally retire, you can move to a house by the fishing village, wake up early in the morning, catch a few fish, then return home to play with kids, have a nice afternoon nap with your wife, and when evening comes, you can join your buddies for a drink, play the guitar, sing and dance throughout the night!

Fisherman: Isn't that what I'm doing now?

That was when the tycoon realised how much of a fool he has been.

The Lesson

Similar, to the tycoon, we often have everything we would need in life, but in our quest for more, we become less abundant. The fisherman, on the other hand, stays true to his calling and sees through the illusion of more. He knows what he loves, and he knows that he has everything he has ever needed in life. Maintaining abundance is simple. It is time to redesign our lives and make it simple, as well.
Embrace Minimalism

More is not always better. In a survey conducted by the American Psychological Association, it was found that 32% of working adults report extreme stress. Nearly one in five reach their highest stress level each month, and almost half claim that their stress level has risen over the last five years. The participants even said that they were experiencing physical pain and health problems due to stress.

The main cause? Work and health.

With an average work week of 47 hours among full-time working adults, it is no wonder we are stressed. Most of us are overloaded with work. Ironically, this tension makes us less productive than we would be if we worked less and actually left work on time. An extra hour every day does miracles. That’s an extra 30 minutes of exercise, another 5 minutes to meditate, and about half an hour to just catch up on life. The simplest way of removing excess: leave work on time.

You Are Who You Mix With

Ever had that moment where you hang out with a friend so much, you start to become so similar?

Following the Mathematical Law of Averages, we are what we repeatedly consume. We are the average of our closest friends, the books we read most, and the media we take in every day.

Consumption Check

List out the top 10 attributes that you see in yourself as of now. This could be in terms of behavioural traits or personality. The first description that comes into your mind should be the ones reflected in this list. It can be either positive or negative. This will be called the "Attributes List".
a. Subsequently, write down a list of things that make you feel abundant. Be specific. This could be from being cognitively stimulated like learning new skills to being more positive. This is your “Abundance List”.

b. Put the “Abundance List” side by side with your Attributes List. Do your traits help you in achieving these goals?

c. Note down the traits that will improve your chances of achieving your goals.

In a 24-hour period, write down the top three people you interact with the most. This is measured by how often you talked to them, texted them, or any form of communication.

a. Create an “Attributes List” for them and compare it with your “Abundance List”.

b. Note down their traits that will improve or deprive your chances of achieving your goals.

c. If their traits are negatively affecting you, then they are taking abundance away from you. This does not mean that you cut all ties with them. Just try to interact less and find someone more worthwhile to spend time with.

Next, note down the the top three sources of information that you have taken in today. This could vary from newspapers, to online articles, and even books. Similarly, determine whether they align to building, or maintaining your abundance. Does it help you to learn that new skill you wanted to learn? Or enable you to have a more positive way of thinking?

Finally, you are now conscious of what you consume. Remove or minimize the activities or people that do not help you build or maintain abundance, and take in more good habits. Read better books. Make time for better people. Simultaneously, you will find yourself living better.
CONCLUSION

You now have all the knowledge you need to cultivate, develop and maintain abundance. When practiced constantly, these three steps will open you up to a world of abundance. A lifelong feeling of warmth and gratefulness, that will increase your overall happiness.

Remember, true success is a state of mind. Only those who are able to be abundantly contented will experience it. And once an individual achieves this state of abundance can he or she draw all the positivity of life to him or herself.

Anything and everything is possible if you learn to look within and around. There is definitely so much more you can do to achieve abundance, but realize that it is rather simple to live a life of contentment.

Jeff Simons
Author of ‘The Abundance Code’
We're just finding out now how people were “coded” at birth to do certain things...
Hard to believe, but...
Pretty much everyone in our society is in the dark about this.
So you're not alone.
Find out about your "code" here.

I bet you can’t guess which muscle in your body is the #1 muscle that eliminates joint and back pain, anxiety and looking fat. This “hidden survival muscle” in your body will boost your energy levels, immune system, sexual function, strength and athletic performance when unlocked. If this “hidden” most powerful primal muscle is healthy, we are healthy.
Take the quiz and see if you got the correct answer!

The truth is... successful people's brains are finely-tuned for creativity. And here’s the best part: Anyone can use it to tune their mind to be creative and achieve success. Whether you want to write a bestseller or start a business worth $100 million, all you need is this 3-minute trick.
Find out the 3-minute trick to fine-tune your creativity, and achieve your goals and dreams.